

PREVIEW

Hello,

The March 2016 Home & Textiles Today Market is just around the corner and we are in the throes of sending our final samples off to New York.

For this market we will showcase two exciting directions. First, we'll be introducing a collection of fabrics and colors with a "stonewashed" appearance, hence the theme for the accompanying blast, Washed Away. Our piece-dyed and process-washed cotton textures are both modern and "vaguely vintage." The faded & frosted focus of these pillows and pads coincide perfectly with the softer palette trending in the marketplace now. A diagonal mini quilt, shady chevron, waffle weaves in heavy yarns, plus terry and looped constructions all bring a casual appeal with a strong sense of style. We will also be showing tonal rug patterns printed on low pile plush and our own "Cheyenne" fabrication in a wide range of chalky pales, including the color-of-the-moment... indigo.

Speaking of indigo, whether light, dark, pale or vibrant, it's as popular as a closet full of denim. From inky incarnations to faded chambray shades we'll have an array of chenille solids, jacquards, stripes, and patterns in this forever color. Textural solids, graphic woven patterns, and romantic damasks all have a worn-in appeal that look perfect and perfectly at home everywhere.

So, that's it. As technology brings us new fibers, textures, techniques and constructions, comfort remains essential and we yearn for the favorite & familiar.

There is plenty to show you in the weeks ahead. We look forward to seeing you in New York.
